Unknown Binding I almost didn't give this 5 stars because I'd have preferred a straight non-fiction account or a fictional account that didn't pose as truth and the only non-fiction is the text in the inside front cover and the author's note at the end. The First Tulips in hollandfahrrad 26 The story is about a normal girl whose father originally procures the tulip bulbs during his travels and the girl's suitor is a normal boy a florist but this story has some elements of princess/prince stories and children who like those types of stories will probably also like this one. Book The First Tulips in holland sentinel Now that aside this book is very large (about 10 x 13 in) and it has such wonderful illustrations filling that space that I feel like I could just stare at one page for quite some time and take in the details. Kindle The First Tulips in holland taylor I liked the story we recently read The Great Tulip Trade by Beth Wagner Brust which is similar and further explains the things people were willing to trade just to have one tulip:
