

Eclipsed By Patricia Burke Brogan It tells the woeful tale of a group of 'fallen' women who have had their babies snatched from them at birth to be given up for adoption and their wretched lives of drudgery earning their keep in the laundry. A beautiful love letter to female solidarity Patricia Burke Brogan it makes life in the laundry seem like summer camp! Patricia Burke Brogan From a dramatic standpoint this is a great play that contrasts the horrors and abuse that took place in the Magdalene Laundries with the friendship and silliness that comes with a close group of young women. It is not able to cover everything about these tragedies but it does really well with its confines and shows the multiple ways these women were abused the forgotten women-and literature like this going forward is giving the spotlight to these women who otherwise never had a voice. Would've given it three stars if not for the over abundance of exclamation marks in the script!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!!! (That's how it felt to read)I'd still love to see the play performed because I do think the story has merit but the production we watched in class didn't do it any justice either ☐ Patricia Burke Brogan I read this play for school but I enjoyed it,

This all-woman play is set in one of the old Mary Magdalen laundries run by an order of nuns:
Patricia Burke Brogan Deeply heartbreaking depiction of a dark part of Irish history Patricia Burke Brogan This play man, My heart sank to my feet from the opening scene and stayed there:
Historically this play is an important work in an issue that is still being brought to light: Patricia Burke Brogan Hard to get a real feel for this as a script but definitely something I would like to see on stage. Patricia Burke Brogan Read this play for school but genuinely found it to be a thought-provoking shameful glimpse into my country's past, It was easy to imagine each character as all of their personalities shone throughout the play: The stage directions were very good and I think it would make a great play with the flexibility of what you are able to do with the directions, It had a very strong ending and was a glimpse of history. Writing was alright strong end. Good stage directions. Tells an important story. Patricia Burke Brogan required read but still worthwhile. Ireland Magdalene Laundries Nuns Elvis you know how it is. This freaking play. Just seemed jumbled. But kudos to Burke-Brogan for bringing this issue to light. Patricia Burke Brogan Waiting on my letter from Elvis. Patricia Burke Brogan.
